Lifestyles When you are a 22-year-old in love with her man, you probably don't think about family, or a future together. You get caught up in the moment, find yourself a bit horny, and go to the nearest hotel to get freaky. But when a stranger mentions that he is HIV positive, it can change everything. That's what happened to Paris Hilton during a recent trip home to Los Angeles. The hotel went through an extensive cleaning process to clear out all the lube and condoms guests had used. Hilton found some in the dryer, and had a big decision to make. She chose to get tested, of course. What about long term relationships? The sooner you and your long-term partner get checked out, the safer you both are. So remember -- no matter if the two of you are dating or engaged -- today is the perfect time to get tested!Eight-Year Case Control Study of Umbilical Artery and Vascular Thrombosis. A case-control study was performed to examine the relationship between umbilical arterial catheterization and occurrence of vascular thrombosis in the newborn. At the 25- to 42-week orat of gestation, two groups of 100 patients were selected. In group A, patients who had umbilical catheterization underwent angiography at the time of delivery. Control group B patients had no umbilical catheterization. Among the 400 infants in the study, 12 cases of umbilical artery thrombosis and 5 cases of vascular thrombosis were observed. The rate of umbilical artery thrombosis (UAT) was 1.5% (95% confidence interval, 0.54-3.55%), and vascular thrombosis (VAT) was 0.5% (95% confidence interval, 0.10-1.89%). A higher rate of antenatal thrombosis was observed in patients who underwent umbilical artery catheterization, but this difference was not statistically significant (7/97 versus 1/103; $p = 0.24$). These observations provide further evidence for a relationship between umbilical artery catheterization and thromboembolism. Since this is a small study, a large number of patients should be examined to confirm these results.Q: Plotly: Plotting an Arc I'm trying to plot

Subscribe To About Me Hi there. I'm a 20 something year old mom and wife from Wisconsin living in the DC metro area. I'm a full time graduate student at the Univeristy of Nebraska studying Elementary Education. Also, I enjoy cooking, baking, and crafting.Can we please have the educational articles published twice a week on Tuesdays and Thursdays? I have to read the on line articles all weekend. I already receive the PBS NewsHour every Saturday morning. It's not that I don't enjoy the KPBS videos; they just don't seem to update very frequently (perhaps they are all mailed to the PBS NewsHour.) That program is a good time to enjoy
